Keynote Speaker:

About keynote speaker

Meg McCullough has spent much of her professional and personal life working with youth – in childcare, after-school programs, and her current work in youth leadership and with Teen Court. Meg has expanded on this experience by also working with adults through teaching childcare licensing and certification classes, community coalition work and professional development for schools. She recently received her Master’s degree in Training and Development, which has helped make her an even more dynamic trainer.

As a Real Colors trainer, Meg has had the opportunity to help groups of youth and adults identify their own color temperament, recognize their strengths and the strengths of others, and to listen and speak in the language of another’s color temperament (learning style).
